

Macaw Art of Life Help: Image Examples

Examples of Illustration Class Types

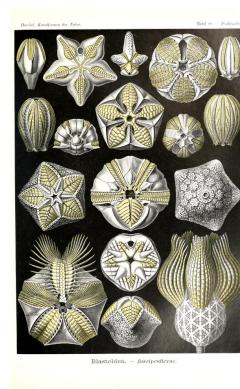

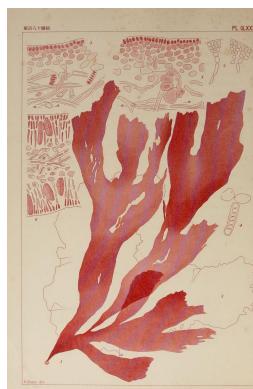

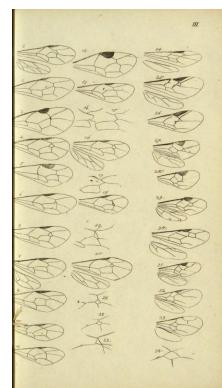

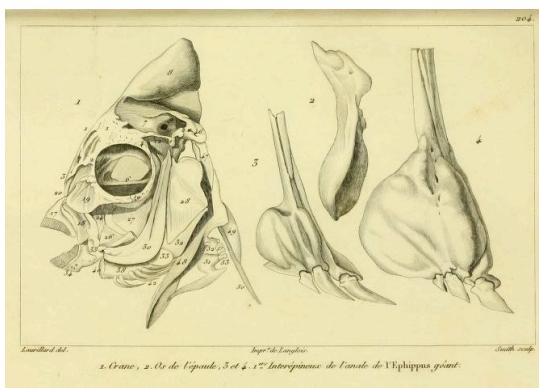

All pages should be classified as belonging to one or more image types: Illustration, Diagram/Chart, Map, Photograph, and/or Book Plate. If a page contains more than one type choose all the types that apply. When indicating image type also indicate the color depth of the image - whether it is "b&w" or "color". If uncertain choose "b&w". If a page contains no image check the box that says "NO IMAGES ON THIS PAGE"

Once pages are highlighted and image types, color depth or Misc applied the data will automatically be saved. You can also click on "Save" if you are not sure if it saved. You can do a review of your work by clicking on the List View and making sure there is data in the Type, Color, or No Img? Columns.

Once your classification is done click "Review Complete" This will change its status to "Finished" on the In Progress page. Otherwise its status will remain "In Progress".

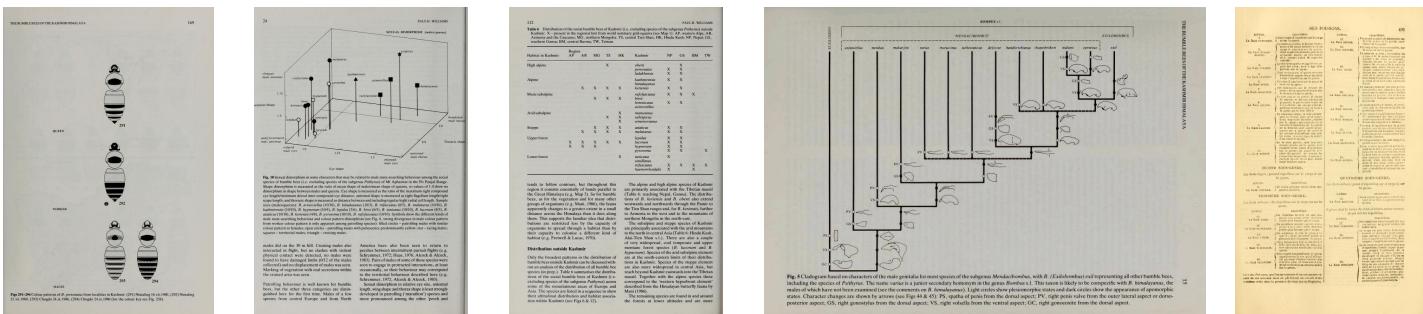

Illustrations

This will be the broadest class type. The majority of pages in the BHL will fall under this type. It will include drawings, paintings, and prints. These are usually hand drawn or hand painted images of species. If there is ever uncertainty as to which type a page should be assigned, the type of "illustration" should be the default.

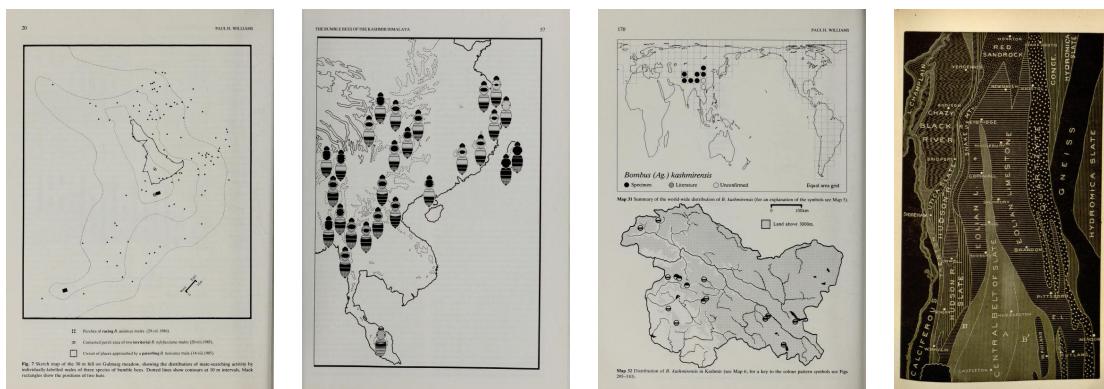

Diagrams/Charts

This type includes technical diagrams, graphs, charts, and tables. It is usually machine-made vs a hand-drawn illustration. The data is usually laid out in a grid like pattern and will sometimes be accompanied by a description or caption beginning with the words "figs" or "table"

Maps

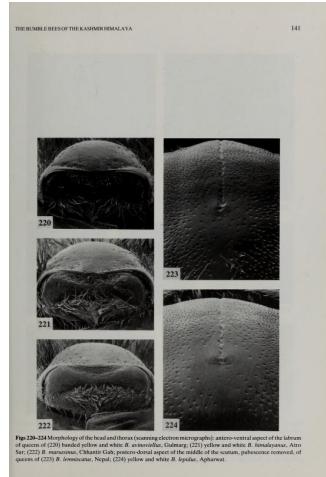

Maps are any illustration that conveys geographic information and will usually be accompanied by a description or caption beginning with the word "map" but could also include "figure"

This one is a mix of map and diagram but if it has any geographic aspect then classify is as a map.

Photographs

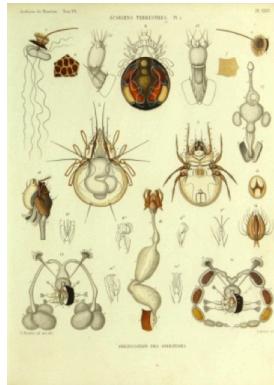

This class includes still images produced from radiation-sensitive materials (sensitive to light, electron beams, or nuclear radiation), and therefore have a more 3-Dimensional quality to them.

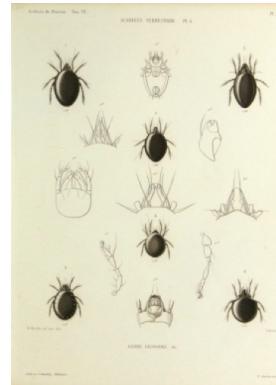

Micrographs are classified as photographs.

Photographs and illustrations should also be identified as being "b&w" or "color"

If a page contains any amount of color, even if minimal, it should be assigned to color.

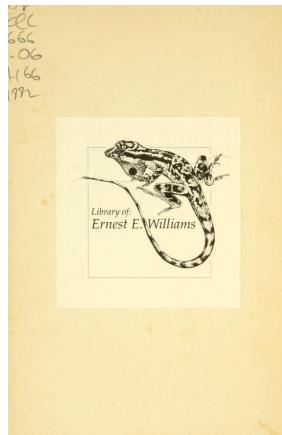

Color Illustration

B&W Illustration

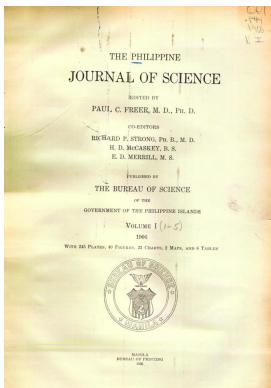

Bookplates

Miscellaneous

Pages that we do not consider as having an illustration or that we do not want to further describe – instead of giving them a type, indicate "NO IMAGES ON THIS PAGE"

Emblems

Emblems that are part of a logo at the beginning of every journal volume, shows up repeatedly in a journal run

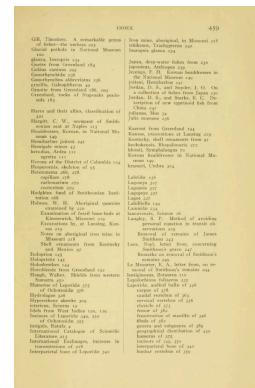

Advertisements

Book covers

Indexes

Illustrations that merely serve decorative purposes and do not have any descriptive information that would allow them to be further described should also be marked as "NO IMAGES ON THIS PAGE"

